

LOOK COOL, FEEL COOL

Our white flannel suits appeal to those who dress with the taste characteristic of men of fashion at the Eastern sea coast resorts. They are cut from material of fine texture, finished with superior facings, buttons and all-silk thread. The material is pre shrunk and coats fitted to models and made to hold their shape. We have never seen better value.

VAN NESS

Patent Oxford Tie

The Van Ness has custom style, first-grade materials, and handsome finish, making it one of our most fashionable dress Oxfords.

PRICE, $4.00.

Its popularity as a shoe for informal dress wear—and particularly street wear—is already assured. The toe is not extreme in shape, but has very graceful lines and a decided forward slope. The vamp of Patent Leather is carefully hand-lasted to bring out the style modeling of the forepart, arch, and instep.

Extra attention has been given to the finish of this model, the linings, stays, facing, and other trimmings being of a special selection. See this shoe in our windows.

CLASH OF THE SWORD AND PEN

Captain Carter of the Navy and Reporter Moore Come to Blows.

Lieutenant Commander J. F. Carter, U. S. N., is under arrest by the police, charged with assault and battery, the complaint against him having been made by F. B. Moore, a reporter on the staff of the Evening Bulletin. The alleged assault took place yesterday morning at the Naval Station, where the reporter had called for the purpose of obtaining an interview with Captain Rees. Carter was arrested after six o'clock yesterday evening by Officer Reeves, being released on his own recognizance to appear for trial on Tuesday. When the warrant was first shown to Carter, at the Naval Station early in the afternoon, he refused to accept service on the Naval Reservation, but agreed to allow the arrest after his office hours.

It is understood that United States District Attorney Breckons will appear for Carter at the police court trial and raise the point of jurisdiction, claiming that the assault, if there was one, took place on a United States reservation and outside of the jurisdiction of the Territorial courts.

W. R. Farrington, editor of the Bulletin, it is understood, interviewed Captain Rees yesterday regarding the alleged assault on one of his men, making a request that the offending officer be court-martialed for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. Captain Rees took the stand, however, that the affair had been one of man and man and something that did not call for a court martial.

Moore makes the following statement of the affair:

"I had not gone down to the Naval Station to see Captain Carter at all, but had been upstairs in Engineer Parks' office and on coming down did not pass the door of the officer with whom I had the trouble a few moments later. I was about to leave the building by the Waikiki entrance when Carter came out of his office and called me back. He then started in saying:

"Are you responsible for that story in the Bulletin the other afternoon?" "He did not say what article but I understood him to refer to the story, a couple of days ago, in reference to his running the Iroquois aground when he was trying to tow out the St. Louis.

"I replied that I was not responsible for all of the facts, but for part of them, and that I had written the story. He then said:

"Are you aware that some of the statements in it are untrue?"

"I replied that I was not aware of it. He then asked me where I got my information and I refused to tell him. He went on to ask me if I had attempted to verify the facts and I said that I had verified part and, since I had the rest from a very reliable source, considered that I had done enough. I also said that I had tried to see him and that I had been told that he had gone up town.

"Carter then told me that I must retract the story entirely on my own authority, which I told him that I could not do very well, as I knew some of the facts were true which he had practically acknowledged himself. I then offered to print any statement which he might care to make. He refused to make any statement and began to get excited, talking in a louder voice.

"He almost shouted then, 'Do you mean to say that you doubt my word?' "I answered that I did not doubt his word. Then he said:

"You deliberately made misstatements in that story."

"I replied: 'Captain Carter, I want you to understand that there may have been inaccuracies in the story, but there was no deliberate misstatement.' "He shouted: 'I tell you, you lied. You lie.'"

"As he did this he stepped up close to me and as I was standing with my hands by my side, or possibly one of them may have been in my pocket, he struck me in the face with his right hand. He followed this with a blow in the breast from his left and I tried to defend myself and hit him several times and he also hit me probably four or five times. Then he rushed me and with his superior weight I was forced back off the lanai.

"Then the orderlies came rushing out and Carter ordered me off the Naval Station grounds. I told him that I would go, but would like to take my hat. He did not reply but one of the orderlies picked up my hat and gave it to me. I then left."

CAPTAIN CARTER'S STATEMENT.

Captain Carter makes the following statement regarding the affair:

"On Monday, the 29th, there appeared in an article in the Bulletin the following: 'When near the channel, the Iroquois ran into the mud bank. In attempting to get off, she got the tow line mixed up in her propeller, and was soon woefully tangled in the line. A steam launch had to be gotten out from the cruiser, and used to tow around the tug.'

"This statement to the effect that the Iroquois ran into a mud bank is absolutely unfounded. What actually happened was that while towing the St. Louis the tow line carried away and in getting it on board again it got foul of the propeller. The Iroquois was promptly anchored and a line run to the channel wharf by the St. Louis' steam launch, which was close at hand at the time and did not have to be gotten out from the cruiser as stated by the Bulletin. The Iroquois was worked alongside the channel wharf with her own resources and the propeller cleared. She then returned to the Naval dock.

"Shortly before noon today a reporter from the Bulletin appeared at the Naval Station. Heretofore he has usually come to my office for news. He carefully avoided my office today and in leaving sneaked out the backway. I observed him and called him back. I then asked him if he had written the article which appeared in the Bulletin on Monday to the effect that the Iroquois had run aground. He stated that he had written the article but that he had got the facts from other sources. I asked for the source of his information and he declined to give it.

"I then asked if he considered the source of his information reliable and he stated that he did. I then informed him that the statement to the effect that the Iroquois had run aground or on the reef or mud flats was absolutely without foundation, and I asked him what he based the statement on that the Iroquois was in the mud.

"In a supercilious way, he told me, that he saw her out there but that he was not a diver and did not go down to see whether she was in the mud or not. I then told him again that the Iroquois had not been aground at any time that day and that the statement that she was in the mud was untrue, and demanded a retraction. He replied that it was very hard for a paper to say that a former statement which had been published was not true, but that he was willing to take any statement that I wished to give.

"I told him then that inasmuch as he was responsible for the original statement to the effect that the Iroquois had run aground, which statement was not true, I considered it his duty to do the honorable thing and make the correction. This he declined to do.

"I then told him that any person who would make a statement which he afterwards found to be untrue, and did not retract it, was guilty of lying, and the only way I could characterize such a person was that he was a liar.

"He did not attempt to resent this when I repeated it. What happened afterwards, Mr. Moore can tell you probably as well as I.

"Mr. Farrington came down later in the day to call on Captain Rees. Later I was called in to be present at the interview. The editorial statement in today's Bulletin that I have not been misrepresented does not agree with facts printed in the Bulletin the 29th or a similar article two years ago. Mr. Farrington admitted today that he had reprimanded the reporter who had written a scurrilous article about me two years ago for the spirit shown in the article, but he has never made reparation, nor has he today, after the true facts were given him."

From the fact that both parties to the assault are well known, the affair is attracting a great deal of attention throughout the city.

VOTERS WANT VOTING PLACES NEARER

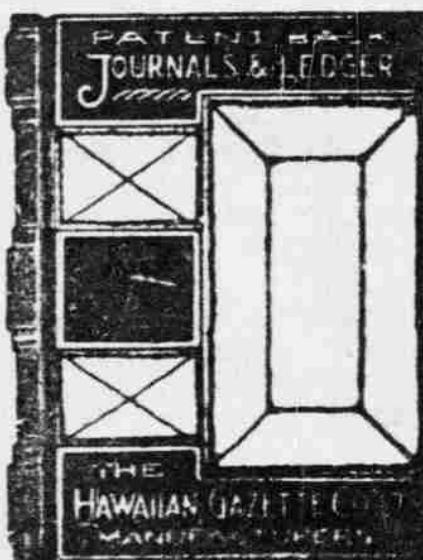

Governor Frear has under consideration a petition from voters of the first precinct of the fifth district asking that the precinct be divided and that there be one polling place at Heeip and another at Waikane. It is claimed that as the precinct now exists some voters have to go miles to their voting place.

He also has a similar petition from the voters of Makawao and Kapakapa. It is desired that a new precinct be arranged so that voters will not have so far to go. As it is some voters have to go miles to Hamakua and others miles to Kula.

KAUAI RAILWAY MAKES A $150,000 BOND ISSUE

A trust deed has been filed with Registrar Merriam conveying the entire property, present and to be acquired, of the Kauai Railway Company, to Cecil Brown and L. Tenney Peck, as trustees, to secure an issue of $150,000 of bonds. The bonds to be issued are in denominations of $1000 and bear six per cent. They are due in ten years and may be redeemed after three years. Interest is to be paid semiannually in January and July. They were authorized at a special meeting of the stockholders held June 24. The bonds are for the purpose of raising funds for extending the road toward the village of Waimea and for other extensions and improvements.

The trust deed makes careful provision for the security of the bondholders in case there should be default in the payment of principal or interest. If the trustees ever have to take possession of the property for the benefit of the bondholders the rights and duties of the trustees are carefully defined and their compensation provided for. But aside from this their compensation is seventy-five dollars a year each.
